

[Inter-school Exchange] Embracing the Springtime and Pursuing Dreams, Win-Win Projects Promote Development — Baotou No. 95 Middle School Hosts Project Delegation from Beijing Foreign Studies University and Linfen No. 2 Middle School

Baotou No. 95 Middle School April 21, 2024, 01:15

As the Grain Rain falls softly, the greenery deepens, and all things grow and flourish. Carrying a wisp of spring rain and a passion for education, Baotou No. 95 Middle School warmly welcomed a delegation from Beijing Foreign Studies University and Linfen No. 2 Middle School for an international project exchange.

After arriving at the school, the delegation visited the foreign teachers' classrooms to experience and learn from the classroom model of the project class at Baotou No. 95 Middle School. They were deeply impressed by the high efficiency of the foreign teachers and students.

02 Visit the school history museum

Teachers from the Beijing Foreign Studies University and Linfen No. 2 Middle School project delegation visited the Baotou No. 95 Middle School History Museum to experience the school's origins and culture.

03 Discussion and Exchange

In the conference room of the office building, Secretary Zhao Yuguo warmly welcomed the visiting teachers from Beijing Foreign Studies University and Linfen No. 2 Middle School, and affirmed the role played by the school's project classes, suggesting that project classes are an effective supplement to diversified education.

From the perspective of effectively implementing the nation's education policy and considering the country's diverse needs for talent, Principal Lai Shusheng defined the school's educational goals as: physical and mental well-being, a strong foundation in Chinese culture, an international perspective, and the cultivation of outstanding talent. Therefore, the school places great emphasis on exploring in-depth cooperation in international programs to achieve multi-level and multi-faceted talent development.

Principal Liu Zhipeng affirmed the achievements of the project class from a teaching perspective, referring to it as the "second experimental class." Furthermore, Principal Liu suggested that the project class provides a suitable pathway for students at different levels, thereby optimizing their college admissions process.

After learning about the educational philosophy and overall situation of the project class at Baotou No. 95 Middle School, Director Jia Zhiguang of Linfen No. 2 Middle School also introduced the school's experience in breaking through development bottlenecks through international projects, teaching adjustments, and competition coaching, and asked questions about the preparation and implementation of the Beijing Foreign Studies University project at our school.

In response to Principal Jia's questions, Ms. Deng Wenhui provided a detailed explanation of the implementation of our school's project classes, covering three stages: initial project development, initial results, and initial scale. She covered everything from school policies and qualification preparation to student recruitment and promotion, the implementation of regular courses, foreign teacher classes, and IELTS courses, the homeroom teachers' planning for students' further education, and finally, the development of graduates. Ms. Deng, adhering to the principles of openness, exchange, and sharing, offered a comprehensive overview of the project, hoping the delegation would find their visit worthwhile.

Director Ma Dong, the project leader from Beijing Foreign Studies University (BFSU), reviewed the history of cooperation with our university and expressed his gratitude for the sincere collaboration between our university and BFSU. He looked forward to a brighter future for the international projects in cooperation with our university and proposed multi-university exchanges and common development with BFSU as a common platform.

At the end of the meeting, Linfen No. 2 Middle School presented our school with a souvenir of "Emperor Yao," representing the origin of Chinese culture, expressing their hope that both schools can cooperate and achieve mutual benefit and vigorous development in the Beijing Foreign Studies University project.
